VnVnc is an ActiveX control that allows you to control your active desktop connection remotely, saving you a lot of time and frustration. All you need is to download, install and run the software, which works like a charm. You can also take control of an already active session. The vnVnc control has multiple features: you can set up the connection parameters, set up the session name and save a specified connection profile for future use. You can choose to enable or disable animations and key repeating.... 15. AtoMotic - Communications/Connection Managers... AtoMotic is a simple to use network application that will allow your users to see the name of your computer, the version of your operating system and the operating system version of the server running on your machine. AtoMotic is very easy to install and use. AtoMotic is compatible with most major operating systems.... 16. MegaPad - Utilities/Other Utilities... MegaPad is a program designed to simulate the GamePad of the Nintendo Wii using a USB gamepad and an electronic circuit board. Simply connect the gamepad to your PC and run the application. MegaPad will allow you to play your games on Windows in the same way you would play them on the Wii console. MegaPad includes two different modes of operation: free and commercial. The free mode is fully capable of using all gamepad features, while commercial is limited to the more commonly used features.... 17. NXJungle - Network Tools/Servers... The number of mobile devices is increasing. People use them everywhere they go. Each of them has a computing device with only 512mb of RAM and CPU. It makes no sense to use multi-threading applications that run on desktop or laptop computers to run on
